I used to say, I just do not understand why they would do that. Now I am grateful I do not get it. Not understanding someone else's behavior just means my heart was not built that way, and that is something worth being thankful for.

PROUDLY MANITOBA

 ARIES Take the lead, but don't rush a decision just to get it over with. A conversation midweek clears the air.

 TAURUS Protect your time this week. Someone may ask more of you than you're willing to give.

 GEMINI Your social side is strong, and the right conversation could spark a great idea. Watch scattered energy—finish one thing before starting three more.

 CANCER Trust what feels steady rather than what feels urgent. A small change brings surprising relief.

 LEO You're getting noticed, whether you planned on it or not. Speak confidently, but leave room for someone else's perspective too.

 VIRGO This is a good week to organize money, plans or unfinished business. Don't overthink every detail. Progress matters more than perfection.

 LIBRA Balance returns when you stop trying to keep everyone happy. Make one choice based on what you actually want. A pleasant surprise may come through a friend.

 SCORPIO Your instincts are especially sharp this week. Pay attention to what isn't being said. Something confusing begins to make much more sense by the weekend.

 SAGITTARIUS You're ready for something different. A change of routine, spontaneous plan or new idea lifts your mood. Just don't promise more than you can deliver.

 CAPRICORN Responsibility is calling, but you don't have to carry everything alone. Ask for help where you need it. A practical decision pays off.

 AQUARIUS Stay open-minded, but don't let other people talk you out of what you know is right for you.

 PISCES You may need a little extra quiet this week to sort out what you really want.

Attracting the Right Relationship - Before we embark upon the journey of finding the relationship that's right for us, we may want to take the opportunity to refine our concept of who we are and our ideas of what we want from life. That way, we can be clearer on the kind of person we want to attract into our lives. Part of the journey of finding a mate is learning how to become our own mate. When we know how to meet our needs without relying on someone else to complete us, we don't have to form relationships from the space of needing our emptiness to be filled. We can also discover our intrinsic value, separate from what someone else might be reflecting back to us. Getting to know who we are and learning to love ourselves creates a solid foundation of self that we can bring to any relationship.

We're fortunate to live in a time when relationships can unfold at a pace that's right for us and can take many forms.

Friendship, dating, open relationships, long-term relationships, long-distance relationships, committed relationships — we are free to choose the kind we want. If you want to be in a relationship but haven't found the right person for you, remember that the universe works in perfect order, and therefore, right now your life is unfolding exactly as it's meant to be. Maybe all this time has been part of your preparation period for meeting your intended partner. Even the relationships in our lives that haven't worked out as we'd hoped serve us by teaching us to make better choices the next time.

Finding the relationship we want can come early or later in life. It may even happen again and again in one lifetime. There is no right or wrong for how to find a relationship, nor is there a timeline you have to adhere to. Follow your heart, listen to your inner voice, continue to become your own soul mate, and stay open to love. The journey of finding the right relationship begins with being in the right relationship with yourself.

The Apple Orchard Logic Puzzle

Four friends—Aiden, Chloe, Leo, and Mia—went to the local orchard on a crisp Saturday in September. Each friend picked a different type of apple (Honeycrisp, Gala, Fuji, or Granny Smith) and wore a different colored flannel shirt (Red, Blue, Green, or Yellow).

Use the clues below to figure out who picked which apple and what color shirt they wore!

The Clues

- The person wearing the red flannel didn't pick the Honeycrisp apples.
- Chloe wore the green shirt, but she didn't pick Fuji or Granny Smith apples.
- The person who picked the Fuji apples wore a yellow shirt, and it wasn't Leo.
- Aiden loves tart apples, so he specifically chose the Granny Smith variety.
- Mia did not wear the red flannel shirt.

Angela Lansbury told a story about her daughter falling under the spell of a Hollywood deadbeat. He would pick the girl up from school and get her to steal money and food from her parents for him. Worried, Lansbury moved the entire family to Ireland.

The guy was Charles Manson.

You're Allowed to Change
You're allowed to stop liking things you once loved. You're allowed to change your mind, your habits, your boundaries, your circle, your goals and even the way you see yourself.

Sometimes the hardest part of growing is realizing that other people may still expect the old version of you.

The one who always said yes.
The one who kept quiet.
The one who let things slide.
The one who made everyone else comfortable, even when it came at their own expense.

And when you start doing things differently, some people may not understand it.

That doesn't mean you're doing something wrong. Growth can look strange to people who only knew you before you learned better.

Maybe you no longer explain yourself as much. Maybe you protect your peace a little more. Maybe you finally say, "No, that doesn't work for me." Maybe you stopped chasing people who never seemed worried about losing you. That isn't becoming cold.

Sometimes it's simply becoming clear.

We spend so much of our lives thinking we have to remain consistent so people won't accuse us of changing.

But changing is exactly what we're supposed to do.

Life teaches us things. People teach us things.

Heartbreak teaches us things. Age teaches us things. And sometimes, after all those lessons, we become someone our younger self wouldn't even recognize.

That can be a beautiful thing. You are not required to stay who you were just because someone else was comfortable with that version of you.

Keep growing. The people who truly love you will learn the new version too. — Ruby
