When We Feel Anxious - So many of us are feeling dysregulated right now — especially as we experience the financial pinch, navigate emotional struggles, and witness unprecedented collective events unfolding around us. It's only natural that anxiety would find its way in. But what might happen if, alongside everything that feels difficult, we intentionally turned our attention toward the small things that help bring us back to center?

Take a moment to reflect. Have there been pockets of goodness in your life? Maybe you've gotten some much-needed time away from work. Perhaps you've tried a new recipe, enjoyed a meal around the table with people you love, or eaten at your favorite restaurant. Maybe you've begun taking care of yourself in new ways and adopted some helpful wellness practices.

Life can be hard and beautiful at the same time, and part of caring for ourselves is learning to notice both. We may not always have control over what is happening around us.

But we can choose how we meet this moment. And sometimes, tending to our mental health begins with something very small: seeing what nourishes us, appreciating what is here, and taking one small step toward greater groundedness, harmony, and well-being.

GARDEN HARVEST BEEF STEW

A perfect late-summer or fall recipe for using up potatoes, carrots, onions, tomatoes and whatever else is still coming out of the garden.

Ingredients

- 1½ lbs stewing beef, cut into bite-sized pieces
- 2 tbsp oil
- 1 large onion, chopped
- 3 cloves garlic, minced
- 4 carrots, sliced
- 4 medium potatoes, cubed
- 2 celery stalks, chopped
- 2 cups chopped fresh tomatoes
- 1 zucchini, chopped
- 1 cup green beans, cut into pieces
- 4 cups beef broth
- 1 tbsp tomato paste
- 1 tsp dried thyme
- 1 tsp dried parsley
- ½ tsp rosemary
- 1 bay leaf
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 1 tbsp Worcestershire sauce
- 2 tbsp flour mixed with ¼ cup cold water, for thickening

Directions

- Brown the beef in oil in a large pot or Dutch oven.
- Add the onion and garlic and cook for another 2–3 minutes.
- Stir in the carrots, potatoes, celery, tomatoes, beef broth, tomato paste, Worcestershire sauce and seasonings.
- Bring to a boil, then reduce heat, cover and simmer for about 1½ hours, or until the beef is tender.
- Add the zucchini and green beans during the final 20–25 minutes so they don't overcook.
- For a thicker stew, stir in the flour-and-water mixture and simmer for another 5–10 minutes. Remove the bay leaf before serving.

How many would your kids recognize?

Adopt the pace of nature:

Kindness Is Never Wasted

There is a lot of noise in the world right now. Everybody is angry about something.

Everybody has an opinion. Everybody is ready to argue, correct, prove a point, or tell somebody else what they should have done differently and sometimes, in the middle of all that noise, we forget how powerful it is to simply be kind.

Not fake nice. Not smiling through gritted teeth while secretly wishing somebody would step on a Lego. I mean real kindness.

Sometimes kindness is huge. It is paying somebody's grocery bill, showing up during a crisis, sitting beside someone in a hospital room, or helping a stranger get back on their feet.

But most kindness is tiny. And that is what makes it so easy to underestimate.

You have absolutely no idea what somebody is carrying when they cross your path. The woman who seems distracted might have spent the night worried about her child. The grumpy old guy ahead of you might have just lost his wife.

The teenager who barely looks up might be fighting a battle nobody knows about.

Sometimes one decent interaction can be the thing that reminds a person that the whole world hasn't turned cold.

Being kind does not mean being a pushover. You can have boundaries and still be kind. You can say no and still be kind. You can walk away from people who treat you badly and still be a good person.

Kindness does not require you to set yourself on fire to keep everybody else warm. It simply means choosing, whenever possible, not to make somebody's day harder than it already is.

Kindness is never wasted.
